SCHOOL AND ALUMNI NOTES

'77—Hon. William J. Mills, last territorial governor of New Mexico, "has indeed good reasons to feel deep pride in the progress and development of New Mexico while he was acting as its chief executive," says the Albuquerque Morning Journal in a sketch of Governor Mills. "Further, the people of the state are proud of the progress made during his administration, as showing what the new state could do while yet a territory."

'99—The dissolution of the firm of Vincent, Boss & Barnefield, counsellors at law, of which Henry M. Boss is a member, has become necessary through the elevation of Mr. Vincent to the bench of the Supreme Court. The business formerly conducted by that firm will be continued under the firm name of Boss & Barnefield with offices, as heretofore, at 48 Custom House Street, Providence, R. I.
